Economy Begins at Home

A great many things begin at home.

Charity, of course.

Economy, also. But in a prosperous and self-confident country like America economy of the home is often "more honored in the breach than in the observance."

American thrift doesn't always occupy the place in the home that it should. In its stead extravagance and carelessness frequently run side by side.

Economy, however, ought to exist and CAN exist actively in every household where the individual members wish it.

There is no longer any secret about the things you spend your money for. Practically every human want is answered in the columns of good newspaper advertising. And if a family really wishes to practise economy the way is made easy by a careful and systematic effort to keep well informed on everything that is purchased for the home itself or for its members personally.

The advertising in The Express tells a story of vital importance to every household.

Not to pay attention to it means that you are not interested in the first principles of thrift.

TEACHERS ON STRIKE.

Pupils In Hertfordshire Take a Hand In the Affair.

LONDON, Feb. 3.—Lively scenes marked the first day of the strike of elementary school teachers in the County of Hereford, Eng., the first of its kind in the British Isles.

Seventy schools are closed and at the other schools the children resented the appearance of new teachers and made demonstrations in sympathy with those who have resigned. When the school at Ross, the largest in the county, should have opened, the boys paraded the town, singing songs and cheering.

Towards 10 o'clock they were induced to enter the school. Immediately there was pandemonium. Ink-pots were thrown about and desks overturned. Finally the boys broke out of the building and marched again through the town, the demonstration still proceeding last night, with the apparent approval of the townsfolk.

SAYS MOUSSEAU IS ILL

Doctor Describes Strange Symptoms of Accused Ex-M.P.P.

He Is Lingerling Between Coma and Unconsciousness and Not Fit To Be Examined Either In Court or at Home—Investigation Continues and Will Be Carried to Conclusion.

QUEBEC, Feb. 3.—When the legislative investigation into the allegations by The Montreal Daily Mail that J. Octave Mousseau, who has resigned his seat in the Quebec Legislative Assembly, was resumed last night. Dr. Adolphe De Martigny, a Montreal specialist, appeared before the committee and testified that Mr. Mousseau was so ill he could not specify whether he would ever regain his health. He is lingering in a condition between coma and unconsciousness, declared the doctor. He cannot be made to understand questions asked him; he does not sleep or take nourishment.

Mr. Bisailon, K.C.—"Is there any reason to believe that he is shamming?"

Dr. De Martigny—"Not at all. It is impossible to tell the consequences were he to come here. When I tried to quiet him he wept. To a layman his symptoms might appear strange, but to a physician they see a perfectly possible under the circumstances. The only thing to do is to try to nourish him, and, if necessary, send him to a sanitarium where he may have perfect rest."

Armand Lavergne—"Do you think he is acting a part?"

Dg. De Martigny—"It would require an extraordinary actor. He does not eat. When one of his children was brought to him no recognition was shown."

Mr. Lavergne—"Did you show him money?"

The doctor did not reply.

Though Mr. Mousseau has resigned his seat, the enquiry will proceed, first to determine whether the charges against him of accepting bribes are true, and secondly, to discover if any other members of the Legislature are guilty of the same offence.

Discussing the matter, Hon. L. A. Taschereau, chairman of the committee, said: "We will make the investigation as thorough and complete as possible."

When asked regarding the lines of the report the committee will submit to the House of Assembly, in view of the fact the only member of the House who is accused, has resigned, Mr. Taschereau replied:

"Our conclusions will be based on the evidence. We may lay before the House all the evidence heard, or we

th, Redmond, and Birrell Discussing Home Rule.

NDON, Feb. 3.—John E. Redmond, the Irish Nationalist leader, Augustine Birrell, Chief Secretary for Ireland, were closeted with Sir Asquith at his official residence in Downing street yesterday noon, and it was understood that the government had determined to make another effort to conciliate Ulster before the heated debates in Parliament fan into flame the admittedly serious situation in the northern part of Ireland.

Redmond generally thought that Mr. Asquith holds the key to the position and it is pointed out in some quarters that if he is willing to go to the same lengths as Premier Asquith and the members of his Cabinet ready to advance in order to place the north of Ireland, the threats of war in that country can be avoided.

When asked regarding the lines of the report the committee will submit to the House of Assembly, in view of the fact the only member of the House who is accused, has resigned, Mr. Taschereau replied:

"Our conclusions will be based on the evidence. We may lay before the House all the evidence heard, or we may report our findings in the evidence."

It was decided to proceed with the enquiry and leave the question of Mr. Mousseau's appearance adjourned in the meantime.

Mr. Beck, formerly editor of The Montreal Herald, under whose instructions the detectives' investigations were made, continued his evidence relating to Mr. Mousseau's visit to Mr. Hyland, when he spoke of the necessity of "settling with members of the lower House."

Mr. Marchal, counsel for The Daily Mail: "Did Mr. Mousseau admit then that he had collected $1,050 already?"

Mr. Beck: "He did. He was pleading for the balance of $1,050. He said the safest way was to pay the balance due the members of the lower House, as they had acquaintances in the upper House whom they would influence to vote for or against the bill. If, he said, the promises were not kept some of them might be inclined to oppose the bill through their friends in the upper House."

The committee adjourned until today.

FOR "ADVERTISING"

Some Illuminative Instances of Reciprocity in Government Advertising.

The Borden Government, subsidized by the Big Interests, is busy subsidizing, as far as it can, the agencies directing public opinion in its favor.

One of the handy methods for doing this is by way of extending advertising and printing patronage to newspapers and printing companies which support everything that the government does, and look with disfavor on Liberalism and Liberal policies. Several hundred Conservative papers throughout the Dominion shared during the last fiscal year in the distribution of something over $1,400,000 of public money for advertising and printing. Whether or not their editorial comment on issues of the day was thereby prejudiced may be left for their readers to gauge.

Some of the amounts paid to government organs are decidedly interesting. The Winnipeg Telegram, for instance, controlled by Sir Redmond Roblin and Hon. Robert Rogers, came in during the last fiscal year for $20,237. The Nationalist organ of Hon. L. P. Pelletier, L'Evenement, of Quebec, got the tidy sum of $23,327, and La Patrie, of Montreal, which printed the picture of the proposed bridge across the St. Lawrence as a lure to the voters of Chateauguay in the recent bye-election, received pay to the extent of $23,408. That the Conservative-Nationalist alliance is still in effect is evidenced by the fact that Le Devoir, Mr. Bourassa's paper, received $1,312 during the year for "advertising" the various departments of the government. The Halifax Herald, edited by the recently appointed Conservative Senator Dennis and which preaches that Mr. Borden can do no wrong, and the Liberals no right, was helped to the extent of $13,312. The St. John Standard, in which the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, Hon. J. D. Hazen, is interested, did even better than that. It got $16,133. The Mail and Empire of Toronto, which used to fulminate roundly against "the reptile press," came in for $12,641 for inserting government advertisements. It is simply a subterfuge to excuse inaction. The demand for free wheat has been backed up by irrefutable argument and by uncontroverted facts and figures. No government apologist has made any serious attempt to advance sound reasons why the demand should not be granted. The "insufficient" reasons advanced for the removal of the duties on wheat and flour are overwhelmingly conclusive. They may be summarized as follows from the speeches made in the Commons:

1. The wheat growers as a body desire their removal and have memorialized the government to that effect.
2. The Legislatures of the provinces most affected, including the Conservatives led by Sir Redmond Roblin, favor their removal.

3. The western grain grower needs another market which is offered close at hand, to absorb the enormous surplus left after the demand of the local market and Great Britain has been supplied.

4. There is no entangling treaty or pact involved in the action necessary to give this market to the farmer.

5. The retention of the present duties constitutes the imposition by Canada of an export duty on wheat, the revenue from which cannot go to the Dominion treasury.

6. The removal of the duty need not disturb any other existing schedules of the tariff.

7. The throwing open of the American wheat market will be a factor in lowering freight rates, as it will place the Canadian railways in competition with the American lines, on which rates are at present lower.

8. The removal of the duties on wheat products will not disturb the milling industry of Canada, which has already proven that it is able to compete successfully with American flour on the neutral markets of the world. The opening of the American market should rather act as a stimulus.

9. The stimulation of the Canadian milling industry would encourage mixed farming.

10. It would increase the value of his wheat to the farmer, and at the same time benefit the consumer. It has been shown that while the price of flour on the Chicago market is lower than in Winnipeg, the price of wheat is higher.

11. It would increase the present low margin of profit to the farmer, who under present conditions is compelled to throw the bulk of his crop on the market before the close of navigation, thus causing prices to drop at the time he has grain to sell. An additional market would be available after the close of navigation.

12. Any increase in the farmer's profits would be of advantage to the eastern manufacturer, who depends for the sale of his articles upon the loan in London. The situation has become serious.

Under the circumstances there should be caution. There is waste and recklessness, careless of the fact that the present spendthrift tactics are prejudicing Canada's future. The Ministers are sowing the wind and the people will reap the whirlwind in more oppressive tariff burdens, increased interest charges, and in the conditions which must follow from impaired national credit and the waste of national wealth.

But still the government follows Mr. Nicholson's advice—"dash away and spend the money; we don't want any reduction in debt."

"HIS MASTER'S VOICE."

BRITISH COLUMBIA CANNERS COMBINE WIN OUT WITH MR. HAZEN.

Proofs of the ready heed which is given by the "Big Interests" government to the will of the combines and of the mergers continue to multiply. The latest evidence is found in the government's course in connection with the regulations prohibiting the export of sockeye salmon from British Columbia. These facts brought out in the Commons a few days ago by J. H. Sinclair, the Liberal member for Guysboro, N. S., establish clearly that when the word was spoken by the British Columbia canners' combine and the Canadian Manufacturers Association, the Government refused to come to the aid of the fishermen, against the monopoly of the packers, while at the same time the Minister of Fisheries, Hon. J. D. Hazen, had promised such action, and had actually declared in the Commons that the desired relief had been granted.

In the days of the former Conservative Government a regulation was passed prohibiting the export of sockeye salmon from British Columbia waters. The fishermen must sell their catch in British Columbia or not at all. Protests against the regulation were made on many occasions by the fishermen and by those who spoke for them. In the session of 1912 these protests were renewed by Conservative members from British Columbia. They condemned the regulation in strong terms. They declared that it operated against the fishermen and operated unfairly in the interests of the canners who were now united in one large association.

Hon. Mr. Hazen, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, joined in the discussion. He denounced the regulation in vigorous sentences. He expressed surprise that it could be in force. And then, amid the cheers of his supporters, he made this announcement: "On Saturday last I had that regulation repealed."

What happened? A day or so after Mr. Hazen announced that the regulation had been repealed, a telegram came to him from Mr. W. D. Burdis, secretary of the British Columbia Salmon Canners' Association. In that telegram the association entered "their earnest protest against the removal of the restriction." Within a few days another telegram of protest was forwarded by the canners, this one to Premier Borden, and the Government was urged to take no action until a deputation of canners could interview the Ministers. Lest these protests should not serve their purpose the aid of the Manufacturers Association was called in by the combine and a telegram urging the retention of the regulation pending a thorough investigation by experts was sent to Mr. Hazen by the Advisory Committee of the manufacturers' organization.

This was sufficient for the Government. The regulation was retained in force. It is in force to day.

THE VOICE OF A CHILD

How One of the World's Greatest Birds Was Discovered.

Many years ago a maid employed by Miss Lundberg, a famous dancer at the Royal Opera in Stockholm, was on a holiday by her mistress and sister to take a walk. Passing a shabby house in the poorest section of the city she heard a child's voice, which seemed to her wonderfully fresh and full, and, looking up, she saw a girl sitting near the window singing a pet kitten. In great excitement she rushed to her mistress and told her of the exquisite voice she had heard. Miss Lundberg was somewhat skeptical, but finally went to the house and heard the sweet song. She was so convinced of the great natural talent of the child's voice and reported it to Croelius, the singing master at the opera.

Croelius was also somewhat skeptical at first, but at Miss Lundberg's request he, too, went and, standing by the sidewalk, heard the child sing. Enraptured in turn, he told Burke, manager of the Royal opera, that arrangements were made by which the little girl sang for the count.

She was at once taken as a free pointed Conservative Senator Dennis and which preaches that Mr. Borden can do no wrong, and the Liberals no right, was helped to the extent of $13,312. The St. John Standard, in which the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, Hon. J. D. Hazen, is interested, did even better than that. It got $16,133. The Mail and Empire of Toronto, which used to fulminate roundly against "the reptile press," came in for $12,641 for inserting government advertising at top rates. The Toronto News, which recently referred to Hon. Robert Rogers and Hon. Frank Cochrane as "the two strong men of the ministry," was subsidized to the extent of $10,165. This may or may not have something to do with the unequivocal support accorded Mr. Borden by Sir John Willison, the one time eulogistic biographer of Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

It is interesting to note that the Orange Sentinel and the Catholic Register ran a close race for a share in government advertising patronage. The Sentinel received $1,541 during the year, and the Register, $1,413. But, as compared with this liberality of patronage, the Canadian Churchman got only $60.60 for advertising, the Congregationalist, $74, and the Christian Guardian, $22.70. The Presbyterian and the Westminster were not on the list at all. The Calgary Eye Opener, however, which was formerly banned from the mails as an indecent publication, is restored to favor. During the year it got $261.70 from the public treasury for "advertising"—or over four times as much as the Canadian Churchman.

Practically every Conservative paper throughout the Dominion, daily or weekly—several hundred, all told—were favored during the year with generously paid advertisements.

Finally it may be noted that the government paid $19.35 for advertising the Canadian Naval Service in the United States, and $126.16 for advertising it in British and foreign countries—to say nothing of the cost to Canadian pride and patriotism of Mr. Borden's advertising of Canada as a country which can neither build nor man her own war vessels, or do her own fighting.

"SUFFICIENT" REASONS.

BUT MR. ROGERS STILL HEARS THE CRY OF THE MONOPOLISTS AGAINST FREE WHEAT.

Hon. Robert Rogers, Minister of Public Works, and chief western representative in the Cabinet, speaking on behalf of the government in connection with the free wheat resolution introduced in the House on Wednesday by Dr. Neely, member for Humboldt, declared that better, and sounder reasons would have to be advanced "before it would be wise for the government to deal with any tariff changes which would affect such important industries as those referred to." The important industries referred to were those of farming and milling.

The government's unctuous desire for further reasons, before understanding to comply with the Liberal demand that the farmer be given access to the American market for his wheat, is obviously due either to almost incredible obtuseness or is else

the present low margin of profit to the farmer, who under present conditions is compelled to throw the bulk of his crop on the market before the close of navigation, thus causing prices to drop at the time he has grain to sell. An additional market would be available after the close of navigation.

12. Any increase in the farmer's profits would be of advantage to the eastern manufacturer, who depends for the sale of his articles upon the prosperity of the farmer.

The above are some of the "reasons" so far given, and proven to be economically sound. It would seem to be difficult to conjecture what further "reasons" the government requires. Perhaps, however, Mr. Rogers was referring to the reasons which most move the government—the reasons which have to do with campaign fund contributions from the big interests who do not want their monopoly disturbed.

"DASH AWAY—AND SPEND."

CONSERVATIVE MEMBER BLUNTLY STATES THE GOVERNMENT'S POLICY.

The Conservative attitude in regard to the sanctity of tariff protection all around as a permanent policy and in regard to lavish expenditure of public money has been fairly well indicated by members of Government speakers and Government newspapers in recent weeks. It remained for Donald Nicholson, Conservative member for Queens, P.E.I., however, to state that attitude frankly and even bluntly when he spoke in the debate on the Address in the Commons a few days ago.

"What is the use of proclaiming in favor of protection if we don't stand for it?" he exclaimed amid approving Government cheers. "We should have subsidies for shipbuilding and bounties for copper refining and other related industries."

"We don't want any reduction in debt. Dash away and spend the money."

There we have the attitude of the Government and its supporters expressed in a very few words.

Elected with the unstinted assistance of the Big Interests on the policy of High Protection the Government steadfastly adhere to the idea that there must be no lessening of the tariff burdens upon the people. If there are any important tariff changes they hold, it must be in the way of tariff revision upwards. That is the idea Mr. Nicholson had in mind. It was the expression of that idea which brought applause from his fellow Conservatives. The combines and the mergers, which profit through protection at the expense of the workmen of the farmers, the fishermen and of the other every-day citizens of Canada, insist that there shall be no tariff reduction, and the Government accepts their will as law. To quote the words of Hon. Mr. Pelletier, Protection is to them "a sacred principle." From such a party the people of the Dominion can expect no relief in the way of a lessening of tariff taxation. The other outstanding characteristics of the present Ministry is extravagance and recklessness in the expenditure of public money. Mr. Borden and his colleagues spend prodigally and wastefully. Hundreds of thousands of dollars are squandered on works of doubtful public benefit though with a constant eye to party advantage. Witness the practical doubling of national expenditures since the advent of the new administration.

The present is the financial stringency in Canada. The revenues of the country are falling steadily and rapidly. The credit of the Dominion has been impaired, a fact shown by Hon. Mr. White's recent experiences when he sought to float another large pose the aid of the Manufacturers' Association was called in by the combine and a telegram urging the retention of the regulation pending a thorough investigation by experts was sent to Mr. Hazen by the Advisory Committee of the manufacturers' organization.

This was sufficient for the Government. The regulation was retained in force. It is in force to day.

The regulation had been denounced by supporters of the government as unfair and unjust, as a restriction which placed the British Columbia fishermen at the mercy of a combine to which they must sell at whatever prices the combine was graciously pleased to pay or else must throw their fish back into the water or upon the shore to rot. The regulation had been denounced by the Minister of Marine and Fisheries himself and its repeal announced.

But when the combine spoke the government listened. The combines said that the regulation must not be repealed. The Manufacturers' Association said that the regulation must not be repealed. They spoke and the Government obeyed. The will of the combine was law to the Ministers.

So it has been since Mr. Borden took office; so it will be until his Government is replaced by one which puts the interests of the people first.

STUTTERING.

Treatment by Which the Affliction May Be Overcome.

There is no cure for stuttering. This does not mean that no stutterer can be cured—far from it—but that there is no treatment which is sure to cure. If a stutterer be taken in childhood, when the affliction is first noticed, and carefully treated he can sometimes be cured and generally much improved.

Dr. Frank A. Bryant of New York, writing in the Medical Record, says the first thing to do is to make sure that there are no obstructions in the throat or nose, such as enlarged tonsils or adenoids. The child must be taught to breathe through his nose, deeply and slowly, as a habit. He must not be allowed to speak when excited nor when laughing or crying or in the paroxysms of whooping cough. He must never be tickled. All causes of excitement must be removed. Fresh air, scrupulous cleanliness, plain, nourishing food, moderate exercise and plenty of sleep in a dark room are essential.

Mental treatment is of great importance. Any measures that will increase mental poise are of incomparable value. The stutterer must be impressed with a desire to overcome what is only a bad habit. He must be persuaded to study the great art of speaking correctly. Thus, by careful, patient work on the part of his parents, teachers and physicians, will he gradually cure himself, or at least so improve as to make the affliction cease to be serious.

Shipwrecks and Courts Martial.
The custom of holding courts martial. In the British navy after every case of shipwreck has a curious origin. In 1711 the Wager, one of Commodore Anson's vessels, was wrecked off the coast of Chile, most of the crew being saved. The men and some of the junior officers held that they were no longer amenable to discipline because their pay ceased with the wreck, but the captain, whose name was Davy Cheap, differed, treated them as mutineers and shot one of his midshipmen. He was then deposed, and most of the crew made off in three of the boats. Later when it was proposed to proceed against the so called mutineers the law officers of the crown decided that the men had been correct in their view. This discovery led to the framing of section 91 of the articles of war, which provides that in the case of shipwreck, destruction or capture by the enemy a ship is held to remain in commission pending inquiry by a court martial.

A SPOTTED bull in a meadow dwelt. And mighty fine that critter felt. A lion's roar the bull he had, And he was always ripping mad.

Much has been written about the ferocity of the African buffalo and the rhinoceros, but right here at home we have an animal almost, if not fully, as dangerous to human life and limb—the bull. The rhino will charge the hunter whether provoked or not, but the bull may go along for days acting as meek as a cat and then turn on his owner without excuse and gore him to death.

An Ohio newspaper has gathered statistics to show that during the year 1912 the bulls of that state caused the death of twenty-one persons and inflicted serious injuries on about thirty more. Such a thing as a good tempered bull is hardly known.

This spotted bull he ripped and tore. While all around him cussed and swore. He horned a horse to death one day And on the next a cow did slay.

He tossed a haystack ten feet high; The wagon shed was made to fly; He leveled fences by the mile; He killed a colt with joyous smile.

Edmonton, Alberta, Can. — "I think it is no more than right for me to thank you for what your kind advice and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound have done for me.

"When I wrote to you some time ago I was a very sick woman suffering from female troubles. I had organic inflammation and could not stand or walk any distance. At last I was confined to my bed, and the doctor said I would have to go through an operation, but this I refused to do. A friend advised Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and now, after using three bottles of it, I feel like a new woman. I most heartily recommend your medicine to all women who suffer with female troubles. the farm before he was killed amounted to over $300. Let us follow our bull. His end is near:

One day as he was ripping mad He saw a sight that made him glad Adown the hill a hobo came And he was short and fat and lame.

He saw the bull—he did not run. For he was used to all that kind. Just one old bull—why should he care? His whistle was a jolly air.

"He cometh onward," said the bull—"He's either lunny or a fool. I'll paw the earth, and then I'll roar, 'And that there ginx will be no more!'"

It was a hobo of long years' standing. He had been thrown off the roofs of a hundred freight cars and been bitten by a hundred different dogs.

He knew where to let a cyclone or a farmer's pitchfork hit him.

He halted at the foot of the hill and made ready.

Two miles was heard that awful roar. Ten rods of ground that bull pawed o'er, Then like a cloudburst on he swept. And angels they looked down and wept.

A Warning.

A farmer was at his gate, and when he saw the hobo, the Bull and the situation he waved his arms and shouted:

The row of houseboats, each with its flowers, awning, flotilla of skiffs; the quantities of well groomed boats for hire among the willows all along the Thames' banks—this impression comes on the top of that of the half hour the other day coming into London in a sickly fog, of the horrible miles of Bermondsey and Lambeth along the lines, the ruthless heaps of rubbish, the hurry and grime of the two stations at Waterloo. The houseboats, etc., are the elaborate flower of that ugly plant called civilization. A Betting Favorite.

There is no record of a fight between an American bull and an elephant, but if such an affair ever takes place there will be men who will bet their money on the former.

A fine big mule in sportive play He nipped, that spotted bull, one day. The farmer heard a crash, a crack— The mule lay dead upon his back!

A country schoolhouse caught his eye As he walked out so gay and fly. When he got through his little fun That country school was on the run.

An Indiana farmer owned a particular bull for five years. During that time, although he was not called an extra vicious animal, the bull gored the farmer twice, his wife once and caused the death of a son and of a hired man. He killed two horses, three calves and a steer. He destroyed property for others amounting to over $200. The law finally got after him and said he must be shot. The sheriff went into the field to do it and was charged and gored to death. The bull then jumped the fence and made off, and he went so far that he was not heard of again.

This spotted bull of which I write All other bulls did promptly fight. When he had broken of their bones And listened to their dying groans

He turned him to the railroad track To give the old bulldog a whack. The engineer he said, "Oh, no!" And back to town that train did go.

Of course the feed of a bull is the same as that of an ox or cow, but here and there an animal has developed an appetite for something not down in the books. It is recorded that one in Michigan ate up 300 pounds of maple sugar in two days, that one in Canada gulped down a barrel of turpentine, that one in Virginia ate seventy-five pounds of butter, thirty-five pounds of tallow and ten dozen eggs; that one in Illinois chewed plug tobacco and broke into a cigar store to get it. However:

This spotted bull he got so gay He took all things that came his way. He'd charge into a wall or tree, And dire disaster there would be.

He pawed the earth; he bellowed loud; He issued challenges so proud— "I'm cock-a-hoop of this 'ere town, And what dares face me I will down!"

The Nebraska owner of a bad bull was told that the disposition of the animal would be completely changed if he was given whisky. It did not seem a likely thing, but as a last resort the bull was chained up and given two quarts of the stuff and left to go on a big drunk and sleep it off and awake with no more temper than a calf.

Upsetting Calculations.

The thing didn't work out as hoped for. The bull got drunk all right, but didn't go to sleep. On the contrary, he broke loose, and the damage he did on

A Warning.

A farmer was at his gate, and when he saw the hobo, the bull and the situation he waved his arms and shouted:

"Oh, hobo, spread your wings and fly— Unless you quickly want to die! The bull will surely break your neck, And to such things I do object!"

Did the hobo see the bull? He did. Did he hear the roaring? He had gots. Did he realize that his last hour had come? He didn't.

With folded arms he waited there In what did seem grim despair. The farmer's feelings were intense— The shock it came, it was immense.

Damn that hobo's hide, but didn't I holler to him to fade away! Now we've got to have an inquest and all that. It's mighty curious that!"

The bull lay there upon the ground— The hobo he was safe and sound. "My thunder, can I believe my eyes?" The farmer cried in great surprise. "I felt a jolt," the hobo said, "And then the bull was lying dead. And as 'tis hungry that I am Please hand me out some bread and ham!"

Cheerful Givers.

"Now, boys," said a Sunday school teacher, "I want each of you to subscribe something toward the mission to the Caribbees. I shall hand the box round, and as each of you will contribute you will, I hope, say some appropriate text. Now, Charlie, show a good example."

A ruddy faced urchin stepped forward, dropped in his coin and observed:

"It is better to give than to receive."

Then another contributed a copper, saying:

"Waste not, want not."

This was ruled somewhat out of order, but it was fairly capped by a third youngster, who evidently parted with his penny with extreme reluctance, for as he dropped it into the box he murmured:

"A fool and his money are soon parted."—New York Globe.

That Printer!

A story is told of a "printer's error" that once caused consternation in a country village. An arch in the church had become dilapidated, and a fund was started for its repair.

Upon one occasion, so as to make the appeal more widely known, the rector had a notice regarding the arch fund printed in the village, with the result that on the following Sunday the announcement appeared in large type: "The collection today will be for the arch fiend."—Church Family Newspaper.

Too Competent.

"Why did you send the doctor away without permitting him to do anything for you?"

"He said he could get me up and out in three days," the sufferer groaned, "and my accident insurance amounts to $30 a week more than my salary as long as I'm disabled."—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Oldest Separator.

"I see you keep a cow." "Yep." "Got a separator?" "Yep." "What make?" "I'm it. I separate the cow from her milk twice a day."—Exchange.

ONTARIO POLITICS

OPENING OF LEGISLATURE.

February 18th has been fixed as the date for the opening of the Ontario Legislature. It is not thought likely that Sir James Whitney will be able to be in the House this Session and Hon. J. J. Foy, the senior member of the Council and acting Prime Minister will take his place as leader of the House.

CANADA TEMPERANCE ACT.

Quite unusual interest has apparently been aroused throughout the Province by the results of the voting on Canada Temperance Act on Jan. 29. The chief cause for this keen interest is the unexpectedly large majority in the County of Huron in favor of the Act and against the liquor traffic. The majority was 2,568. The Act also was carried in both the other Counties where the question was up for decision—Peel and Welland. In the latter County the majority was only 30 and in Peel it was 56. There will doubtless be a re-count and litigation in Welland.

Two of the important movements of modern times—the Labor movement and the Woman movement—were dealt with by Mr. N. W. Rowell in a recent speech at Victoria College. "FEED AND PROFIT."

We came across two records recently that set us thinking. A Jersey cow that gave a yield of 14,450 pounds of milk and 727 pounds of fat, consumed an average of 12.4 pounds of meal per day all year. An Ayrshire's record was almost identical, 12.8 pounds of meal per day. Just what the average cow in Canada receives as meal is uncertain, but this is certain, that vast numbers of them would do infinitely better if they got the opportunity and were fed on the basis of one pound of grain for every three or four pounds of milk per day that they yield.

As the average cow in Canada gives probably only about one hundred and forty pounds of fat per year, it a question if she gets an average of three pounds of meal per day. The two cows noted above received four times this amount, and paid for it. More of our cows would pay, that is pay a good profit above the cost of feed, if they got the right feed.

When we find good dairymen willing to give seventy and eight dollars worth of feed to a cow per year, it means they not only have faith in their own judgment, and in the cow's productive ability, but beyond this, they keep records both of milk and fat produced, and feed consumed, so as to be perfectly certain they don't waste good feed on cows that don't produce.

Feed record forms and a herd record book will be supplied free on application to the dairy division Ottawa. Make sure each cow pays a good profit this year.

ness or a recurrent and migration in Welland.

TWO IMPORTANT MOVEMENTS.

Two of the important movements of modern times—the Labor movement and the Woman movement—were dealt with by Mr. N. W. Rowell in a recent speech at Victoria College. Mr. Rowell paid a warm tribute to Allan Studholme, the only Labor representative in the House and declared that he himself looked forward to the day when there would be a score or more Labor members in the Legislature.

In regard to the women Mr. Rowell thought that whatever our own views may be, the forces of this age were tending to the procuring for women their share in the management of the Country's affairs. He thought particularly that married women, otherwise qualified, should be given the Municipal franchise. "A married woman," he said, "instead of being handicapped by her marriage should rather be bonused by the State."

FAVORS BAR ABOLITION.

Mr. George Wilkie, a well known Toronto lawyer, speaking at the Belleville Liberal Club, under the auspices of the Speakers' Bureau of the Liberal Club Federation, declared that although not a temperance man he was absolutely in favor of the Abolish the Bar policy of the Liberal party and thought that the introduction of such a reform would most decidedly be in the public interest. He also made a plea for radicalism in politics.

One Reason.

Frederick Townsend Martin, writer and social leader, was asked at a dinner in New York if he could account for the enormous number of bachelors.

Mr. Martin stroked his mustache and smiled.

"Well," he said thoughtfully, "a bachelor, you know, is a man who never has to answer questions that he doesn't want to answer."—Washington Star.

A CULINARY TREAT

Served In a Little Cake Shop In a Little French Town.

THE COST WAS LITTLE ALSO.

Surprises Came Thick and Fast In the Way of Meals, but the Greatest Surprise of All Came After the Gastro-nomic Conquest Was Ended.

They were talking about dainty dinners when the man who goes abroad said, "The best meal I ever got was in the back parlor of a small shop in a one horse town, and it cost me 50 cents."

Urged to tell his story, he continued:

"It was in a small provincial French town—Blois. A friend of mine called Bodfish enticed me there by looking me up in Paris and throwing a fit
about the delights of the town.

"It has a castle," he told me, "and a moat and ramparts and a little cake
shop run by a charming old woman—
"Enough," said I, "me for Blois."

"We went there and we castled
and we moated and we ramparted,
and then we blew into the little shop to cake. The proprietress, a very pleasant old woman, indeed, introduced us to her son, who was modestly hiding behind his mustache in a corner.

"We got into conversation with him
—that is, Bodfish and I plunged into French and he, diving in heroically
after us, was pulled under in our drowning struggles. The upshot of it all was that we agreed to hire a room
in his mother's house for the night—
we meant to stay just one night in Blois.

"And—er—dinner?" asked Bodfish.

"If the messieurs will permit I will do myself the honor of cooking them
a dinner," said the cake lady's son, bowing most courteously.

"Thereupon Bodfish and I went blithely to an attic 518 years old at a conservative estimate, washed the castle and the moat and the ramparts
from our hands and faces and descended to the dining room, a small apartment in the rear of madame's cake
shop.

"Our landlady's son was there, ready for us. So was a soup.

"That was, by actual count, the grandest soup ever produced by a human being. I have traveled all over the world, tasting the best every country has to offer in the way of soup, but at the first taste of that Blois sample all my memories of other soups had died together in a dark corner of my mind and froze to death.

"I looked at Bodfish. He was positively half witted with delight. He looked as if he wanted to spend the rest of his life as high priest in a temple devoted to the worship—and manufacture—of that soup.

"More, messieurs?"

"Between us we razed that soup to the ground.

"Entree, messieurs?"

"Don't ask me what that entree was Bodfish ate it with his eyes shut and his head bowed reverently.

"Bodfish and I stayed in Blois for twenty-nine meals. Don't ask me how many days that makes, we began only

There was very little change in the condition of the market for cattle. Fully 50 per cent. of the cattle offered were carried over from last week, and as the expense of drovers was considerable,
high prices were asked, which buyers
refused to pay; consequently the trade was almost at a standstill. For full loads of choice Ontario steers, drovers asked $8.50, for which buyers bid $7.50 to $8

BEHOLD, I MAKE ALL THINGS NEW

The Fallen Race of Adam Is to be Made New by Christ.

Man's Original Perfection — The Reign of Sin and Death—A Sad
Spectacle—Thousands of Millions Dead—Hundreds of Millions Dying Weak in Body, Weak Mentally, Morally, and Physically.

PASTOR RUSSELL

Washington,
D.C., Feb. 1.—
Pastor Russell
preached to-day
in the Temple.
His text was,
"Behold, I make all things new."
—Revelation 21:5
The Pastor
showed that the Bible intimates
that the seven days of the week
are typical of seven
great Days,
each a thousand years long. At the beginning of man's Week he was perfect, as represented in Adam; but disobedience to his Creator brought upon him the curse, "Dying, thou shalt die." Under that curse our race has gone down steadily to the tomb—
the Bible Hell—Sheol, Hades.

Next the Pastor showed how ineffectually man has struggled against this course of death. To-day, he said,
our race is assailed by more ailments,
mental, moral and physical, than ever before known. Our jails, penitentiaries, asylums, hospitals, all bear testimony to this fact, he claimed. Even the morals of the world he believes to be apparently at as low a state as could well be imagined, after all our preaching, after all our manufacture of hobgoblins, devils and hells to frighten humanity into church, religion and morality.

Then the Pastor asked whether it is not time to acknowledge our fallure and to cry to God for help ere we perish as a race. Not only have we not converted the heathen world,
but we find the civilized world retrograding. Statistics show that crimes increase amongst the heathen despite the preaching of eternal torture.

Man's Extremity Is God's Opportunity

The Pastor next outlined God's great Plan of Salvation through the Redeemer, who died, "the Just for the unjust," to open the way for man's return to God's favor. During the Gospel Age the Saviour has been gathering out an elect Church to be His associates in a coming Kingdom,
in which He with His Church will reign for a thousand years. During that period Satan will be bound, to deceive the people no more; and the Redeemer will put down sin in its every form.

The Saviour's work at the First Advent—healing the sick and the blind,
casting out demons and awakening
the sleeping dead—the Pastor showed was a foreshadow merely of the greater work which Jesus and His glorified Church will accomplish during the great antitypical Sabbath.
These, as the antitypical Seed of Abraham, will fulfil God's Promise to Abraham, "In thy Seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed."

"More, messieurs?" "Between us we razed that soup to the ground. "Entree, messieurs?" "Don't ask me what that entree was. Bodfish ate it with his eyes shut and his head bowed reverently. "Bodfish and I stayed in Blois for twenty-nine meals. Don't ask me how many days that makes; we knew only two sorts of times—meals and between meals. As for sightseeing, we didn't see much more than our plates, because after each meal in the back parlor of that celestial cake shop we were so chock full that we hibernated like snakes, lay sprawling on couches, unable to budge, blinking sleepily, grunting grunts of Elysian contentment. Time and again we would ask that Frenchman how he had come by his culinary skill, but in vain. He would merely smile and give us another helping. You may get some idea of what sort of meals that cuss gave us when I tell you that Bodfish summed up his ability in these words: "At times he seems to lose his culinary grip and descends to mere perfection."

"After the twenty-ninth meal Bodfish and I remembered that we belonged somewhere, had a number of relatives, were engaged in business, had restive careers to coax along. So we called our cook, announced that we were leaving and wanted to know how much we owed.

"Six francs for each day, messieurs," said he. "One for the room, one for breakfast, one and a half for lunch, two and a half for dinner."

"Bodfish and I fell heavily against each other. Then we paid and started for the door.

"Wait," said our host. "I, too, travel away today."

"Whither are you bound?" we asked.

"To St. Petersburg," he replied. "I came away but to see by old mother in the cake shop. I had not seen her for five years. I must thank you, messieurs, for giving me this chance of keeping up my art. Had you not done so, I fear that, after getting back to St. Petersburg, my art would surely have suffered."

"Whuh-whuh-what are you in St. Petersburg?" we inquired huskily.

sheep and lambs, 1500 hogs and 123 calves. There was very little change in the condition of the market for cattle. Fully 50 per cent. of the cattle offered were carried over from last week, and as the expense to drovers was considerable, high prices were asked, which buyers refused to pay; consequently the trade was almost at a standstill. For full loads of choice Ontario steers, drovers asked $8.50, for which buyers bid $7.50 to $8 per cwt., and as some of the drovers found it impossible to obtain the above price asked, they decided to ship their cattle to the United States market, and several loads were forwarded to Boston today.

Owing to the very limited supply of lambs coming forward of late a strong feeling has developed in the market, and prices have advanced 25c per cwt. with an improved demand for small lots.

To Have Radial Field Day.

LONDON, Feb. 3.—The Board of Control yesterday endorsed the Board of Trade's project for a radial field day to be held in London in the near future, and agreed to provide a place for the conference, the Board of Trade to furnish a banquet.

The idea is to have representatives here from municipalities throughout western Ontario, to discuss the radial railways scheme and to come to some mutual arrangement for securing the crystallization of the plans that have been fomenting in various parts of the province.

Settled Claims.

BRUSSELS, Belgium, Feb. 3. — A definite settlement was reached yesterday of the claims of the three daughters of the late King Leopold in connection with the property left by him. A short time ago they unsuccessfully sued the Government for the entire Congo property, valued at nearly $14,000,000. Afterward the state recognized that they were entitled to some compensation and made them an offer, which they accepted. Most of Princess Louise's share goes to her creditors.

Ship Channel Nears Completion.

OTTAWA, Feb. 3.—The 30-foot ship channel between Quebec and Montreal is practically completed. The total length of dredging in the project is 70 miles, and the length yet to be dredged, says the annual report of the Department of Marine and Fisheries, which was published yesterday, is 4.20 miles. This, of course, was at the beginning of the present fiscal year.

Christendom's Great Mistake.

The Pastor believes that the creeds of the Dark Ages are gross misrepresentations of God's character. Many have taken these misrepresentations too literally. As a result, some have gone to insane asylums; others have turned to pleasure and sin in their endeavor to forget God; and still others have been made unhappy as they thought of kind, good neighbors and friends who made no profession of Christianity.

The speaker then showed that Christendom's great mistake was that of disregarding God's Word and believing Satan's lie, as the heathen do. God declared that the wages of sin would be death—absence of life. Satan contradicted this and falsified to Mother Eve, assuring her that there would be no death penalty. When death came, Satan and his fallen angels perpetrated the lie by telling us that when our friends appear to die they really became more alive than ever. In accepting their testimony we have done what St. Paul cautioned against—giving heed to seducing spirits and demon doctrines.

Evil spirits, he claimed, have seduced Christendom by giving feigned communications between the dead and the living. As Satan and his demon host have full knowledge of human affairs, they can easily personate the dead, and through mediums, witches, planchettes, visions and dreams, represent the dead as still alive.

The Pastor then drew a picture of the coming Messianic Kingdom. He declared that as the gross darkness flees before the dawning light of the New Dispensation we see more clearly where our mistake was. Bible students the world over are studying afresh the Word of God in its own light. Now they perceive that the resurrection hope is based upon the fact that Christ died for all.

Bible students now see that the world's blessing will be a resurrection to human perfection—a lifting up, not only from the sleep of the tomb, but also from all the weaknesses and imperfections of the flesh, back to the full image of perfection lost in Eden and redeemed at Calvary. Thus our great Redeemer will make all things new.

It is rarely, if ever, that palp is due to any disease or weakness of the heart. It is almost invariably result of nervous or digestive trouble. The beat of the heart arises with itself. There are nerves in the wall of the heart, and they regulate the beating, although the speed or the beating is not of their choice. If they were not held in check, it would set a rate about double which is actually maintained.

The heart is supplied from the beginning with two pairs of regulating nerves. One pair, the cardio-motor nerves, only to spur up the heart to action. They are usually in waiting the occasion for applying the spur. The other pair, the cardio-inhibitory nerves, are always in action. It has been said that the heart in a pair of tightly held reins, a simile is true, for these nerves speed. Fear, worry, disordered the stomach or nervous system, these cardio-inhibitory nerves to then the heart begins to race.

There is nothing the matter with heart itself, and no one need be alarmed about that organ just because it beats too rapidly. Its palpitation due to a psychological or a physical cause, something that has caused relaxation of the reins and allow cardio-motor nerves to apply the

Catching a Bride.

Among certain Siberians the groom is not permitted to have until he can catch her. But he not give him a fair race in the end. The bride, surrounded by her friends, awaits him in a big tent soon as she sees him she runs. He follows like Hippomenes after Leda. But instead of obstacles thrown in the way of the bride are thrown across the path of the bridegroom. The pursuing groom over old women, chairs, tables, and fishing rods or is tripped by ropes. Only when it is feared might give up and sulk and go without the fleeing lady is he permitted to overtake her. Then as she is thrown into his outstretched arms it is imagined she utters some equivalent of "This is so sudden!"

DIFFICULT NAVAL FEAT.

Landing Big Field Guns on Shore by the Trolley Route.

That the landing of field guns and munitions of war on shores which vessels cannot approach closely is one of the exciting tasks for the men on the warships of the world's great navies is thrillingly demonstrated. The maneuver is especially necessary in the navies of the colonial powers, which must be in readiness to land fighting forces on any of the unapproachable shores of their colonies. British, German and French sailors have long been trained in making such landings, and since the United States has become a colonial power the crews of American battle ships are likely to be called upon for similar service.

The battleship or transport carrying the guns anchors as near the shore as possible, and a cable is stretched from the vessel's deck to a tripod derrick on shore. A two wheeled trolley from which are suspended the various parts of the guns is drawn along the cable by a rope running to the men on shore. The guns are dismounted, and several trips are necessary to land all the parts of one gun. The most thrilling part of the work is carried on by the men who ride on the load to keep it from swaying or becoming unfastened from the trolley.—Popular Mechanics.

SECRET OF GOOD BREAD.

Flour Should Be Aged in a Dry, Well Ventilated Place.

Here is a secret that many housewives do not know and even some professional bakers do not understand. Flour should be kept in a dry, well ventilated place. The temperature should be about 70.

To make good bread flour should be aged—that is, it should be kept dry and preferably where the air can reach it. Some persons warm a sack of flour and think that this will dry and age it, but such treatment does not reach the middle of the flour.

Experiments show that when flour is aged properly there is a slight loss of moisture, but the flour will absorb more water. In one test a freshly ground sack of flour after sixty days lost a little over one pound in weight, but it gained so much in absorption that it made a gain of several pounds in weight of dough over the original weight. The gluten, which is the life of the flour, also becomes more elastic, and the flour grows whiter.

There is no better way for the housekeeper than to keep a barrel or sack of flour where it will be dry and exposed to the air and also to keep a quantity of flour sifted and ready for use.—New York Sun.

Trivial Cause of a Bloody War.

In the year 1654 a Polish nobleman became obnoxious to the laws of his country by reason of his having committed a crime. He fled to Sweden, whereupon John Casimir, king of Poland, wrote to Charles Gustavus, king of Sweden, demanding the surrender of the criminal. The king of Sweden on reading the dispatch noticed that his own name and titles were followed by two "et ceteras," while the name of the king of Poland was followed by three. The missing "et cetera" so enraged the king of Sweden that he at once declared war against Poland.

to any disease or weakness of heart. It is almost invariably the cause of nervous or digestive trouble. The seat of the heart arises within it. There are nerves in the muscles of the heart, and they regulate its action, although the speed or rate of beating is not of their choosing. They were not held in check they set a rate about double that is actually maintained.

The heart is supplied from the brain by two pairs of regulating nerves. The air, the cardio-motor nerves, act to spur up the heart to quicker action. They are usually inactive, waiting the occasion for applying the spur. The other pair, the cardio-inhibitory nerves, are always in action.

It has been said that the heart runs in the air of tightly held reins, and the reins are true, for these nerves check the heart. Fear, worry, disorder of the stomach or nervous system, cause cardio-inhibitory nerves to relax; the heart begins to race.

There is nothing the matter with the heart itself, and no one need be alarmed that that organ just because it beats too rapidly. Its palpitation is a psychological or a physical something that has caused the loosening of the reins and allowed the cardio-motor nerves to apply the spur.

Catching a Bride.

Among certain Siberians the bride is not permitted to have a wife who can catch her. But they do give her a fair race in the open air, surrounded by her female friends, awaits him in a big tent. As she sees him she runs off. He follows like Hippomenes after Atalanta. But instead of obstacles being in the way of the bride they throw across the path of the groom. The pursuing groom falls over women, chairs, tables, stones, and is tripped up by them.

Only when it is feared he will give up and sulk and go away from the fleeting lady is he permitted to overtake her. Then as she falls into his outstretched arms it may be said she utters some equivalent of "is so sudden!"

of the criminal. The king of Sweden on reading the dispatch noticed that his own name and titles were followed by two "et ceteras," while the name of the king of Poland was followed by three. The missing "et cetera" so enraged the king of Sweden that he at once declared war against Poland. The war was carried on with great bitterness until 1699, when a peace was signed at Oliva, near Danzig. A contemporary writer (Kochowsky) poured out his lamentations on the war in these terms: "How dear has this 'et cetera' been to us! With how many lives have these two potentates paid for these missing eight letters! With what streams of blood has the failure of a few drops of ink been avenged!"

Human Derelicts.

This is the invariable history of such cases. Let an unidentified body of a man or woman, young or old, be discovered, and from all directions will come inquiries disclosing the fact that many persons have disappeared from the knowledge of their friends. Tragedies and heartaches are thus uncovered, for the mere act of inquiry proves that some one in each case has suffered anxiety over the missing one and has feared evil happenings. Crime, shame, melancholy, discontent, unhappiness, desire for adventure, are among the causes that lead to the disappearances.—Indianapolis Star.

THE ISLAND OF THE STAIRS

Being a True Account of Certain Strange and Wonderful Adventures of Master John Hampdon, Seaman, and Mistress Lucy Wilberforce, Gentlewoman, In the Great South Seas.

By CYRUS TOWNSEND BRADY

Copyright, 1912, by Cyrus Townsend Brady

"I do not think even you could, for get that ever," she said, and I could not fathom exactly her purpose in that remark.

Did she not want me to forget it? Or would she have me remember it? But this seemed like trifling. I turned away bitterly, but she caught me by the arm instantly.

"What are you about to do?" she began. "Don't abandon me now. I believe in you. I see now why you did it. It was to save me and help me. What would I do, what could I do without you? I am"—she hesitated; it was hard for her proud spirit—"I am sorry," she finished.

"Say no more," I answered, looking down at the little hand on my sleeve, my soul thrilling to her words and touch. "No harm shall come to you save over my dead body, and that is not enough for me to promise. I mean to extricate you from this peril."

"But is it possible?"

"I think so; I pray so."

"You are one against so many."

"I have one ally in the ship, you forget," said I, smiling at her, relieved and thankful to see her in her right mind again and awake to the truth and my real feeling toward her.

"And that is"—

"Yourself."

"A feeble helper," she rejoined, smiling in turn.

"We shall see."

"And will you forgive me for having misjudged you?" she asked pleadingly.

"Gladly."

"My hand on it, then," she said, holding out her little palm which I swallowed up in my large one on the instant, standing silent as usual, holding it the while.

"Now," I said quickly, thrusting one of my pistols into my little mistress' hand, "we can talk no longer this time. I am going to do my best for you, and if I fail here is a weapon. You know what to do with it."

"Shall I use it on them?"

"No, lass," I answered grimly, "on yourself if it comes to the worst."

"I understand," she said, paling a little.

"Lock the door when I go out, and on no account open to any voice but mine."

"I shall remember."

"And keep up the acting," I said. "Whimper and cower away whenever we are seen together."

"I shall not forget," she said, standing very straight, looking at me bravely, her eyes shining.

"And now goodbye!"

I turned away, but she caught me by the shoulder. She extended her hand rather high. I was not too dumb not to understand what she wanted, and so I bent and kissed it, and it was no light kiss of gallantry, but I pressed my lips passionately against the little hand.

"May God keep you," she said as I turned away, breathing the "Amen" I dare not speak.

I heard the key turn in the lock behind me, and with a heart full of misgivings in spite of my stern and resolute purpose, I came out on deck again.

CHAPTER IX.

In Which We Plan to Escape Together From the Snip.

I HAD no idea that it was morning already, the night had passed so quickly. The eastern sky was

"There'll be no clear weather today, I take it," said an old seaman standing with the other two.

"I don't much think it," I assented.

"Well, what do you advise then?" asked Pinball.

"That we stand on slowly during the day and heave to at night, and if we can't get a shot at the sun stay hereabouts until the sky is clear and the sun visible, then we will know just exactly what course to take and just what's best to be done."

The advice was so self evidently good, in fact the only practicable advice, that there was no hesitation in accepting it. The boatswain stepped up to the horseblock, grabbed the trumpet and shouted his orders. Presently the ship was hove to with the island well under her lee, distant perhaps a league and a half or maybe two leagues. Personally I should not have hove to a ship on a lee shore. I should not have advised it, and indeed would have protested against it had I not suddenly developed a plan—a plan as desperate as ever came into man's head. But then the situation required desperate remedies. And for the accomplishment of the plan the ship was now in the very best position I could have put her.

"That is not far from the point we are making for, is it?"

I was minded to desert the ship with my lady, get ashore and trust ourselves to the tender mercies of whatever natives there were rather than stay with the vessel. I took no stock in the sailors' promises and agreements. Once they got the treasure it would follow that they would kill me and take her.

When we got the Rose of Devon safely hove to the men all knocked off work at once, leaving the decks in a state of confusion. Indeed, save to clear up the gear, there was nothing to do but wait. Two or three men were stationed on watch, and the rest were given the freedom of the ship. I was in doubt as to what to say about the cabin; but, strangely

I sometimes wonder if I would have been justified in killing them while they were rendered thus less. But I could not bring up such wholesale murder, richly deserved it and little as I was to mercy. I also thought of them in irons and stowing them. But there were not irons enough for that purpose, and Mistresses and I could not work the ship. We could not even feed and we prisoners. Yet if I could have on three or four true men's as I would have risked it.

How Mistress Lucy had passed dragging, anxious hours of the day you can better imagine than describe. And my occasional had scarcely reassured her. Yet in an emergency I have known a woman who had more

She had left her noon meal pretty untouched, and she was sitting in the cabin nervously clutching pistol, frightened half to death girl! I don't blame her. We may have been the cause of it, genuinely glad to see me when in and lighted the cabin lantern.

"Oh," she cried, "I have agony the whole day. Every has caused me to seize this and when I have not been at the door I have been on my praying for you and for myself not think I can stand another of this."

"Please God, dear lady, you not," I said, smiling reassured her.

"What do you mean? Have plan?"

"I have. The men are all dead am going to leave the ship as you with me."

"But how—when?"

For answer I threw open the window of her cabin. On a level it swung a small boat, a wh Now I had taken occasion during to lower that boat little by a few inches at a time and the inches at another time, as I opportunity to get near the falls manipulate them unobserved, had brought it down to the level cabin windows. Its sea lashings cast off, and I had no doubt, I tious on deck were as I expected I could lower it all the way lat impunity.

"What do you mean?" she staring out of the window at the empty boat.

"I mean that you and I are embark in that boat tonight on this ship."

"But where are we going?"

"There is land not a league half under our lee. It seems to most easterly of a cluster of islands. Is it the island we seek, think?"

"We are in exactly the latitude the longitude of the chart if my lations are correct."

"The island was uninhabited my ancestor was cast away upon."

"Yes," said I, "but there may tives there now, but no savages south seas could be more cruel ruthless than the men on this ship."

"Let us go," she said, shuddering. "What is your plan?"

"I want you to dress yourself stoniest clothes, with your shoes, wrap yourself up in a boat and take with you a change of and some few necessities for comfort. I will go and arrange

"We shall see."
"And will you forgive me for having misjudged you?" she asked pleadingly.

"Gladly."
"My hand on it, then," she said, holding out her little palm which I swallowed up in my large one on the instant, standing silent as usual, holding it the while.

"And are you not sorry that you— you—kissed me?" she faltered at last.
"No," I answered bluntly enough—being a plain man I have always felt compelled to tell the truth—except, perhaps, when her interests were at stake—"I am not sorry." But as she swiftly tried to draw her hand away I added, "I promise you I won't do it again, and you will forgive me, I know. Meanwhile we have much to plan. We may be interrupted any time and we had best get at it."

I released her hand and she faced me calmly enough.

"You don't know how much safer I feel when I have you to depend upon," she said.

How my heart leaped at that assurance and I saw that she had indeed forgiven me.

"I shall leave everything to you, Master Hampton," she continued. "Do you tell me what to do, and I will do it."

"I know you will. I could not ask a braver, better second," I answered heartily.

At that moment I heard a step on the ladder. Somebody was coming. Quick as a flash I realized the part we had to play in public. I bailed my fist and struck the bulkhead savagely. I suppose I must have changed my expression as well, for in her surprise she screamed faintly.

"That's it," I whispered. "scream again, louder, louder."

"What do you mean?" she asked in incomprehensible amazement, in this crisis my wits working quicker than hers.

"There is somebody outside. We have a part to play. I am abusing you and you are fighting," I whispered swiftly. Then louder, fairly shouting at her indeed, I cried, "Down on your knees, wench. You will find that you have met your master now."

I made some sound of scuffle and she did indeed scream loudly. In the midst of the commotion the door was tried, but fortunately I had turned the key.

"Who's there?" I shouted, and to my lady whispered, "Beg for help!"

Entering into the spirit of the game and smiling at me, since there was none but I to see, albeit she infused strange terror in her voice, so that I was amazed myself, she cried at the top of her voice:

"Help! Help!"

I in turn called louder yet:

"Silence, woman!" and struck the bulkhead again.

Finally turning to the door I opened it a bit, and there stood one of the younger seamen.

"What want you?" I began sternly and stormily. "I don't care to be disturbed just now."

"You are wanted on deck. It is just dawn. Land has been sighted, and there's a heavy sea runnin'. Pimball an' Glibby want your counsel and advice what's to be done."

"Good!" said I. "I will be with you in a moment. Tell them I have yet a word or two to say to this woman here."

The man turned on his heel, passed through the cabin and climbed the ladder to the deck.

hute purpose. I came out on deck again.

CHAPTER IX.

In Which We Plan to Escape Together From the Snip.

I HAD no idea that it was morning already, the night had passed so quickly. The eastern sky was already gray, and although the day bade fair to be an unpleasant one there was already light enough to distinguish land off to starboard. We had run quite near it in the night. It was still too gray to make out much more than the existence of the land itself, but I thought I saw beyond the nearest island others rising. At any rate, there it was where it ought to be, and I didn't make any doubt but that it was the island which we had been seeking these weary months at sea.

The whole crew was on deck. I didn't see any signs of Captain Matthews' body, although I looked hastily about for it. I learned later that they had tumbled him overboard without a prayer or word after they had knocked him on the head. Pimball, Glibby and one or two others of the older seamen were on the quarterdeck, the rest being strung along the leerrail in the waist staring at the island. Two hands were at the wheel. The ship was pitching and laboring heavily, and it required two hands to hold her up to it.

During the night they had taken a second reef in the tops'ls. A whole gale was now blowing. Everything above the tops'ls yards had been furled of course. The Rose of Devon was a wet ship in a seaway, and she was making heavy weather out of it.

I noticed one thing with satisfaction. They had evidently not thought it worth while to break open the arms chest or to force the key from me, which they could easily have done, and none of them was armed.

"Well," I began, as I climbed over the hatch combing and turned aft.

"I sent for you, Hampton," began Pimball insolently, and his failure to "mister" me or to give me any title indicated our present relations, "because of that," and he pointed to the leeward toward the island.

"It looks like land," I said.

"It is land. What land?"

"How can I tell?" I answered. "I have never been in these seas before."

"Well, you took an observation yesterday, didn't you?"

"Certainly."

"And where were we?"

I named a latitude and longitude, not exactly what I had worked out, but near enough. I didn't want these ruffians to know exactly where we were. He pulled out the chart as I spoke and compared its figures with what I had given them. He could read figures if not letters.

"At any rate," he said, after studying over the map for a little time, "that is not far from the point we are making for, is it?"

"No," I admitted, "not very."

"Do you think that can be it?"

"I can't tell for certain," I replied, "until I get another shot at the sun. I should think the latitude about right, but as to the longitude—"

"And you can't get no shot at the sun until noon, can you?" unceremoniously put in Glibby, casting a long look to the eastward where the sky was thick and cloudy already.

"I can't even get an observation then unless we have clear weather," I answered.

safely hove to the men all knocked off work at once, leaving the decks in a state of confusion. Indeed, save to clear up the gear, there was nothing to do but wait. Two or three men were stationed on watch, and the rest were given the freedom of the ship. I was in doubt as to what to say about the cabin; but, strangely enough, nobody made any effort to take advantage of the mastery of the crew to quarter himself there. Indeed, their quarters forward were almost as good as ours, and they evidently preferred to be together. The ship was generously provisioned, and the fare of the men had been unusually good. They did, however, break into the lazarette and help themselves to whatever they liked out of the cabin stores, including a case of bottled spirits.

I brought out other liquor and let them have as much as they wanted. A little liquor would make them ugly and intractable, I reasoned; a lot would make them drunk, and enough would render them completely helpless. I even joined them in their carousal. It was easy enough to spill my liquor and make a pretense at drinking, which soon deceived them. They took to the liquor like ducks to water.

The men on watch kept reasonably sober for a time, but even they were not too abstemious. I saw to that. Later on the cook, who was not yet too drunk, fixed them up a regular banquet out of the cabin stores, and there was no objection to my taking a portion to my lady in the stateroom below, where she kept close and remained out of the way by my urgent entreaty.

My communications that long day with my sweet charge were necessarily intermittent and short. I did not dare to be long away from the men on deck. I still wore my sword, and I searched through the captain's cabin and found two heavy pistols, which I carefully charged, concealing them in the deep pockets of my pea jacket. I passed among the men freely, handing out the spirits, opening fresh bottles and bandying rough jests, but took care never to be in any position where I could not command the companion hatch, which led to the cabin.

Our drift was slowly but surely in the direction of the island. Indeed, I think we had made half a league or more to leeward since we had been hove to. From time to time I searched the shore with a glass, seeing that the land was protected and completely inclosed by a reef, on that side at least, which agreed with the chart, but the sky continued overcast, and the mist grew thicker, so I couldn't make out much more than that. It was land, and that was enough. It was big enough to support life, and I thought that I detected green patches here and there that betokened vegetation and, if so, water and life.

Nobody took any care to strike the bells, but when darkness fell I declared noisily that I would go below and turn in. All but the most seasoned and hardy drinkers were by this time dead drunk. There was evidently some little remembrance of my rank, for no one yet conscious made any objection. Pimball, lying supine on the deck, and Glibby, who was in no better case, with drunken effusiveness assured me that they would take care of the ship, and I went below, having provided all of them with a fresh supply of drink just before.

"Good," said I. I judged it was about 10 o'clock at night. "Now, do you get into the boat, madam."

She had not been on the ship for six months without having learned something, and she instantly asked me:

"But how are you going to lower it away?"

"I will have to go up on deck for that," I said.

"But won't they see you?"

"I don't think so, but whether they do or not we must chance it, but if anything should happen to me I'll cut the boat adrift, and you will be in God's hands."

Silently I assisted her to take her place in the stern sheets. It was not a large boat. On the contrary, yet she made but a small figure sitting there.
 Then I went on deck. I had a can of oil with me to oil the blocks. It was as I fancied. By that time everybody on the ship was asleep in a drunken stupor. The ship was deserted so far as human supervision was concerned.

Still I didn't neglect any precaution.
 I oiled the shives of the block and lowered the boat away carefully, inch by inch, until it was water borne. I reassured my mistress by whispered words as I did so. She had had her instructions and right well she followed them. She had her boat hook out and fended off the minute the boat touched the water. For me to belay the falls and slide down the forward one to cast off and take my place in the boat was but the work of an instant. The oars had been carefully muffled. Although the noise of the waves rendered conversation quite safe, we neither of us spoke a word until I had rowed some distance from the ship.

It was nearly midnight before we got everything shipshape, my lady bravely helping me with her best efforts,
 and the little vessel threshed gallantly
 through the big seas.

I had carefully taken my bearings
 during the day and as I had a good compass on the boat I knew exactly how to steer. Fortunately the wind held steady. I laid her course so as to clear the northeast end of the island, around which I intended to swing so as to be hidden from the ship at daybreak.

I told her after awhile that she was safe. No sound had come from the ship and the lights in the cabin which at first we could see dimly presently disappeared. Our escape had not been discovered. I suggested at last that she should go to sleep. I arranged the boat cloak and blankets and although she had to be much persuaded I finally prevailed upon her to lie down in the boat, her head by my knees, and thus we sailed on through the night.

When day broke I hauled aft the sheet and headed the boat to the southward, for I had now crossed the head of the island and could run down the other side. By the time it was fairly dawn I had made enough southing to place the north end of the island between ourselves and the ship. I steered the boat toward the land.

My hopes were high and I felt a kind
 of exhilaration at our escape, although
 I was by no means inclined to minimize the possibilities of peril we might soon be compelled to meet. The island

My hopes were high and I felt a kind
 of exhilaration at our escape, although
 I was by no means inclined to minimize the possibilities of peril we might
 soon be compelled to meet. The island was our destination, however, and for it therefore I determinedly headed my small craft with its precious and still peacefully sleeping cargo.

The island was unlike any I had ever looked upon. In the first place, like most Pacific islands, it was inclosed by a barrier reef, over which the waves broke in whitecaps as far as I could see. I supposed that somewhere
 there would be an opening in the reef through which we could sail. That was invariably the case with all such islands that I had ever known or read about. But I could not see the opening from the boat yet. The lagoon enclosed by the barrier reef seemed to be a quarter or half a mile wide.

The strangest part of the whole scene was that the island itself looked like a whitish gray wall rising straight up from the lagoon for, I suppose, from 150 feet in the lowest part to 300 feet or more without a break. Its top was covered with greenery. It stood up like a solid rampart of stone. From where we were I couldn't see the end of the island, although from my inspection of it the day before I judged it might be six or eight miles long, and as I had sailed past it I estimated it was about the same breadth and nearly circular in shape.

A long distance away on the other side and hard to be seen at all from the level of the sea in the small boat lay other islands, faintly outlined on the far horizon.

I suppose I must have thrashed about somewhat when I brought the dingy to the wind and changed her course, for presently my little mistress awoke. She sat up instantly, and after the briefest acknowledgment of my good morning and the briefest reply to my inquiry as to how she did she stared at the land toward which we were edging in so far as the wind would allow. It was a bleak, inhospitable looking place, that gray, rough wall, in spite of its infrequent crust-ing of verdure. I will admit, and she, too, found it so. After she had stared hard at the land she cast an anxious glance to leeward, but, of course, could make nothing of the distant islands there.

"We must get ashore," said I, "as soon as possible. By the time their debauch will have worn off they will either bring the ship here or send the boat after us. Afloat we can do nothing, ashore we may find some concealment and probably make some defense."

"It is a bleak looking spot."
 Indeed, not a curl of smoke anywhere betrayed the presence of mankind. Had it not been for depressions in the walls of the cliff here and there which were filled with vegetation, one might have supposed the island to be nothing but a desolate and arid rock, but this reassured me. I thought it strange that there was no mountain or hill rising from beyond
 the top of the wall, but I was yet to see how strange the island was.

CARING FOR THE WINTER BORN CALF

Winter dairying is held in favor by some men who are on to their jobs, because they can give the calves better attention, writes a correspondent of the Iowa Homestead. Such dairymen give their calves well lighted and well ventilated stalls, and these are kept as clean and have as much care as the stalls of the older cattle. Plenty of warm bedding is furnished, and if there is any suspicion of foul odor a light coat of lime is scattered over the floor before fresh bedding is applied.

To give the calf the best possible chance it is well to have a pen or yard attached to the stall on the sunny side, but sheltered from the west and north winds, where the young calf can take exercise. In this yard a drinking trough should be placed; also, a manger in which to feed hay or other forage, which they will partake of as wanted through the day.

The milk that is fed the young calf should be as near the temperature that it is drawn from the cow as possible,

The value of pure blood in the dairy is proved by the career of the cow here-with illustrated. She was a Jersey of the Tormont strain and was owned by the Kentucky Experiment station. She was dropped in 1904 and died eighteen years later. In her four-year-old form she made a week's butter record of 18 pounds 14 ounces of butter and a year's record of 676 pounds of churned butter and 10213 pounds of milk. She was an excellent breeding cow and established a large family of heavy milking daughters.

give one or two tablespoonfuls of castor oil in a pint of warm milk each night and morning. A half pint of strong tea made from spice cloves with the same amount of milk will also have a checking influence on the bowels.

Some make a feed of gruel made of meal to mix with the milk. I do not think this advisable, as it seldom fails to give the scours. Dry, coarse meal is much better for the calf than the wet, sloppy feeds. When fed dry feed the calf is compelled to chew it and mix it more thoroughly with the saliva and thus prepare it for complete digestion.

There is little trouble in teaching the young calf to eat dry feed. If a little meal is placed on its tongue or placed in its drinking trough its natural instinct to eat what is within its reach will assert itself, and it will soon be chewing its food well.

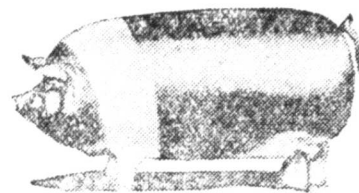

WINTERING BROOD SOWS.

Alfalfa Hay Furnishes Nutrient For the Unborn Progeny.

A number of years ago we worked out the problem of wintering our brood sows from the time they were bred to farrowing on alfalfa hay, says the editor of Hoard's Dairyman. Previous to that time we had in common with other farmers lost heavily in young pigs. The sows were wintered mainly on corn and house slops, and the pigs were born weak and so lacking in vitality that many of them died. Studying the matter one day, we were convinced that the mothers were not given a sufficient amount of protein to properly nourish those young bodies before birth.

Every pig is a mass of protein, and how will the sow get enough of that element to make those little bodies and endow them with living vigor unless the farmer is wise enough to give it to her? If she were ranging in the forest the nuts and roots would furnish it. But on the farm she is confined to the pen and yard. So to experiment we placed nine brood sows in November upon a ration of alfalfa hay and what drink they needed, which was mostly water.

The foreman of the farm and all the neighbors were sure we were making a mistake. They were certain the sows would fall away in flesh and all that

The Hampshire breed of hog, known also as the Thin Breed, has until recent years been but little known or bred. Formerly it was hard to get a class for these hogs, but as their good qualities became known there has been much demand for them. The Hampshire is a peculiarly marked breed, having a band of white around its fore body. As a bacon hog the Hampshire has won many friends, for on the market it competes favorably with the Tamworth and Yorkshire.

But the sows ate the hay ravenously, largely so, we think, because it was furnishing an element they so much

IN THE HORSE BARN.

The average mule will do as much work at two years old as the horse will at three or four.

Keep the feet level and keep the shoes on the outside rim of the foot.

Do not let the horses cool off too suddenly after hard work or driving.

Dust and plaster on floors to keep the odors down. Fumes of ammonia from reeking piles of manure will injure a horse's eyes.

Breed your mares to only the best stallions. We have enough common colts.

Never leave home at this time of year without a blanket for your horse and a topcoat for yourself.

FEEDING BEEF CATTLE.

A Good Margin of Profit in Fattening Home Raised Calves.

There are several reasons why beef cattle are scarce, but one of the foremost is that farmers are selling their veal calves at the age of six weeks, writes W. G. Noland in the Orange Judd Farmer. They do not consider how much loss is incurred by doing so. These calves can be placed on pasture, and before the owner realizes it they are old and large enough to be put on dry feed and be fattened for market. This is one reason for the scarcity of feeding cattle and high priced beef, but most of the farmers who sell calves at such a tender age do it because they don't care to or don't know how to feed a steer for market.

A calf that is born, reared and fattened on the same farm is the one that pays. Not only is it a better feeder, but it is generally a quiet and hearty animal. Not every farmer, of course, is prepared to feed cattle, but if he wishes he can be without a great deal of expense. Not every farmer, on the other hand, knows how to feed and fatten cattle, but this can be learned by beginning with a small number and gaining experience little by little.

I have found that it is poor economy to underfeed, however expensive feeding material may be. If a herd of cattle is on the farm to be fattened the corncrib must not be nailed solid nor contents spared. When I am feeding cattle I use whatever feeds I have that will be eaten to advantage and with a relish. I use bran, crushed corn, corn stover, hay, cottonseed meal, and give free access to rock salt. I have warm sleeping quarters and a good stack of straw in the lot where the animals are kept. It is a loss to any cattle feeder to try to make a profit on a herd of cattle without having hogs to follow them. Much corn is thrown from the feeding troughs by the indifferent steer, and this scattered grain, including the droppings, makes a fattening ration for a number of good sized shotes.

Those who can get cattle and hogs to feed should not question the advisability of feeding the corn rather than selling it at an unsatisfactory price. The price for good beef is likely to hold.

She was dropped in 1894 and died eighteen years later. In her four-year-old form this sow made a week's butter record of 15 pounds 14 ounces of butter and a year's record of 656 pounds of churned butter and 10218 pounds of milk. She was an excellent breeding cow and established a large family of heavy milking daughters and granddaughters at the Kentucky experiment station. She had thirteen calves, five bulls and eight heifers. The bull calves found ready sale and have been shipped to various parts of the United States at prices ranging from $75 to $200.

...these are born much more abundant for them. The Hampshire is a peculiarly marked breed, having a band of white around its fore body. As a bacon hog the Hampshire has won many friends, for on the market it competes favorably with the Tamworth and Yorkshire.

But the sows ate the hay ravenously, largely so, we think, because it was furnishing an element they so much needed in meeting the demands of their unborn progeny. To the surprise of all they kept up in flesh and, indeed, made some gain. During the coldest of weather they were given an ear of corn apiece to help furnish bodily heat.

When farrowing time came the nine sows had eighty three pigs, with not a weakling or titman among them. All lived but three, which were killed by the mothers lying upon them. We fattened and sold the eighty pigs. There was a vigor about them from birth up that told how well they had been nourished while the mother was carrying them. Since that time we have followed this practice every winter with our brood sows and have seen no reason for discontinuing it. There is something about alfalfa that is a great body builder.

...the indifferent steer, and this scattered grain, including the droppings, makes a fattening ration for a number of good sized shotes.

Those who can get cattle and hogs to feed should not question the advisability of feeding the corn rather than selling it at an unsatisfactory price. The price for good beef is likely to hold.

To make this short feed the steers ought to range in weight from 1,000 to 1,200 pounds when purchased. Then as heavy cattle are always in demand by packers they should make a large net profit.

CAUSES OF SWEENEY.

Treatment For Wasting of Shoulder Muscles of Horses.

The common cause of sweeney, or wasting of the muscles of the shoulder, is sprain of the parts, brought about when a young colt is plowing or pulling hard in any way, says Dr. A. S. Alexander in the Farm and Fireside. It is most commonly caused when the colt is placed in the furrow, as then it is constantly slipping in and out of the furrow. It is best to place a colt on the land side when learning to plow.

In many instances so called sweeney is wasting of the muscles of the shoulder, due to some chronic foot disease which causes lameness. Navicular disease or chronic corns or ringbone commonly leads to wasting of the muscles of the shoulder. It is therefore necessary in every case to decide what is the true cause. If it is from foot lameness the muscles will grow in again if the lameness is cured.

In ordinary sweeney without lameness the animal should be kept at work, and three times a day the wasted parts should be thoroughly rubbed and the skin pulled away from the flesh. At night a strong liniment may be rubbed in. If lameness is present stop working the horse and rub with liniment twice daily. In addition massage the wasted parts or have the parts blistered with cerate of cantharides after removal of the hair. The blister may have to be repeated several times at intervals of two or three weeks.

Care of Brood Sows.

The brood sows should be handled so one can go up to them at any time. A good time to have them farrow is about April 1. A good place is a stall in the horse or cow barn. The time of farrowing can be determined quite exactly. The milk comes into the teats four to six hours before farrowing. Don't feed the sow for twenty-four hours after farrowing, but give her slightly warmed water. Then feed something like oats and some shorts. When the little pigs are five or six weeks old begin feeding them some grain feed like ground oats.

Give the Hogs a Chance.

Hogs will make the cheapest growth when they get three-fourths of their feed from pasture. This pasture should not be grass, but some legume or rape. Hogs grown on such pasture can be brought to the pork stage for from two-thirds to one-half the cost when on dry feed. They have better bone and muscle, fewer lice, and instead of lying down and breathing dust they are nosing about among the herbage and breathing pure air. They are healthier and stronger. The sows will have more pigs and better ones, and the danger of cholera is less.

It Is the Best Remedy

When you are run-down, no matter what the cause.

It doesn't merely stimulate you and make you feel good for a few hours, but takes hold of the weakness, and builds you up to a healthy, normal condition.

It is a real nerve-food tonic, a real builder of healthy nerves, rich blood, strong muscles, good digestion.

It contains the Hypophosphites, to tone the nerves and give energy, and pure Olive Oil, to nourish the nerves, the blood, the entire system, and give vitality, strength and health.

It is pleasant to take, the greasy flavor of the Olive Oil having been removed.

For you who are tired out, nervous, run-down, debilitated, weak, emaciated—for convalescents—for old people—for puny children—we recommend Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion as the best medicine we know of to make and keep you well and strong.

DEATHS.

COLLINS—At North Fredericksburgh, on Friday, Jan. 30th, 1914.

OBITUARY.

The many friends of Mrs. O. S.
Davis, Mount Pleasant, were shocked to learn of her death, which occurred at her home January 23rd, 1914.

Deceased had apparently been in good health, but contracted pneumonia, and although everything was done that loving friends and medical aid could possibly do to restore her to health, she passed peacefully to her Eternal home.

Mrs. Davis, nee Mary Jane Oliver, was of U. E. Loyalist descent, born in Tyendinaga, October 14th, 1862; came to Richmond with her parents, seven years later and resided at her home, near Mount Pleasant, until the date
of her marriage to Mr. O. S. Davis,
November 17th, 1881.

Sister Davis, since her conversion in 1887, during a series of special meetings conducted at Gilliad, on the Can-nifton circuit, has been a faithful and consecrated worker in the Methodist church, a woman whose life was radiant with the joy of indwelling of the Holy Spirit.

She was a most efficient and energetic worker in the Sabbath school, officiating as superintendent and intermediate Bible class teacher, for a period of eight years. She was also President of the Ladies' Aid, which position she held for four years. Mrs.
Davis was possessed of a gracious kindly disposition, and by her Godly life and example, as well as her words of Christian counsel, was a constant inspiration to her home and to those who were associated with her in the Christian life.

Although her life was manifested a spirit of self-sacrifice which moulded her character into love and kindly deeds for others.

The funeral took place on Sunday,
January 25th, leaving her late residence at 1 p.m. Service in Mount Pleasant church conducted by her pastor Rev. J. W. Down, who preached from the text (2 Tim. 4: 7-8.) The remains were placed in Riverview vault.

Resides her husband she leaves five children to mourn the loss of a kind and loving wife and mother. The children are: Marshal, Memphis, Tennessee; Fred and Frank, Mamoo, Alta.; Nellie, residing at home and Olive,
attending Napanee Collegiate Institute.

The family have the sympathy of their large circle of friends in their sad bereavement.

An order appointed a committee to administer the estate of James Cummings, of Belleville, a man over 70 years of age, was made by Chief Justice R. M. Meredith at Osgoode Hall.
He has a considerable estate, consisting mostly of houses in Belleville, the value of which is computed at $45,277.

Did as He Was Ordered.

A new boy had gone on board a West India ship, upon which a painter had also been employed to paint the ship's side. The painter was at work upon a staging suspended under the ship's stern.

The captain, who had just got into a boat alongside, called out to the new boy, who stood leaning over the rail, "Let go the painter!"

Everybody should know that a boat's painter is the rope which nukes
it fast, but this boy did not know it.
He ran aft and let go the ropes by which the painter's staging was held.
Meantime the captain was wearied
with waiting to be cast off.

"You rascal!" he called. "Why don't you let go the painter?"

"He's gone, sir," said the boy briskly. "He's gone—pots, brushes and all!"
—London Standard.

Badly Timed.

"It's a great pity," said the convicted burglar to his counsel, "that you couldn't have made that closing speech
of yours at the opening of the case."

"I don't see how that would have improved matters," said the advocate.

"It would, though," explained his efficient. "Then the jury would have been asleep when the evidence came on, and I'd have stood some chance."

Plausible.

"The trouble with this tooth," said
the dentist, probing it with a long,
slender instrument, "is that the nerve
is dying."

"It seems to me, doctor," groaned the victim, "you ought to treat the dying
with a little more respect."

Her Progress.

"The last time I saw you you were complaining about your servant being so slow."

"Oh, she's progressing now!"

"Is she really?"

"Yes; she's getting slower and slower."—Exchange.

Plenty to Fall Back On.

"I'm afraid my eyes are going back
on me," said the egotist.

"Don't worry," replied the modest man. "You have an inexhaustible supply."—Chicago Record-Herald.

To wish is of little account. To succeed thou must earnestly desire, and this desire must shorten thy sleep.—
